Staircase solar integrated machine for home use

Overview

Do you need a stair lift for a multistory home?

But mobility limitations can make some home features, such as stairs, a challenge. If you want to age in place but find your multistory home has become difficult to navigate, a stair lift could be a good choice. Stair lifts use a motorized chair to transfer you from one story of your home to another, reducing the risk of a fall on the stairs.

How do stair lifts work?

You sit on the chair, buckle yourself in, and use a control (typically located on the end of the armrest) that allows you to direct the chair up or down. The chair swivels, either automatically or manually, so you safely face away from the stairs as you enter or exit the lift. How long do stair lifts last?

Stair lifts typically last about 10 years.

How do I choose the best stair lifts?

Some companies (like Lifeway Mobility) rent stair lifts or sell used models, which could save you thousands. We looked for the following features when choosing the best stair lifts: Stair lifts are designed to enhance your mobility. So they should be easy to access for a wide range of people.

Which stair lift is the smoothest?

But whether it was the Elite or Elan in a curved or straight model, testers found the same thing—Bruno stair lifts were consistently the smoothest and quietest. “The Elite Curved was the smoothest curved stair lift I tried and the Elan Straight was the smoothest straight stair lift—both from Bruno,” one tester said.

Do stair lifts improve mobility?

When we surveyed 600 older adults with mobility challenges, 65% of respondents said their stair lifts have brought enhanced mobility and ease of movement. And 92% of respondents said their stair lifts have a “positive” or “very positive” impact on their life.

How do I buy a stair lift?

To purchase a stair lift, contact the dealer or company that interests you the most and schedule an appointment. They will usually send a representative to discuss your needs and walk through your home with you. Then, they will provide you with a customized quote tailored to your specific needs.
